The Evils of Slavery.

One of the most encouraging signs for those who hope to see the day when LIBERTY shall be proclaimed "throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof," is the disposition manifested, even in States where Slavery exists, to discuss the tendencies and influences of this institution. The establishment of the True American, a professed Slave State, was a step forward in the work of disseminating correct opinions on this subject throughout the whole Union. It is true that before it had been many mouths in operation this press became the victim of mob violence; but the suspension, thus caused, of the "True American" will be but tle again, as fearlessly and efficiently as ever, in behalf of Human Rights and Human Progress .-But it is not in Kentucky only that men begin to talk over the evils and iniquities of Slavery, and to east about for the best means of removing what is at length felt to be a growing and grievous burden. Beveral letters have recently made their appearance in Maryland, written by Mr. John L. Carey, a candidate for the Legislature, in reply to one addressed to him by Mr. R. S. Stewart, soliciting his views on the general questions of slavery and emancipation. Mr. Stewart, himself a planter and slave-holder, remarks in his letters that he had had frequent opportunities of discussing these subicots with slave holders of all parties, and that among them all "not a single objection was made "How much corn may a gentleman cat" whisper'd Fep to the principle of emancipation;" the only ques- While the coles on his plate lay in tiers; tions being as to the best time and proper manner. Mr. Carey, in reply to Mr. Stewart's inquiries, takes up and discusses the whole subject with abil-Carey proceeds to illustrate its injurious effects upon the growth and prosperity of those portions of the Union wherein it is tolerated, by the following sketch of the slave-holding districts of Maryland and Virginia:

Statistics of Lowell.

A small pamphlet has recently been published containing some very interesting details respecting the growth and progress of Lowell. The first attempt to establish manufactures there was in 1813. and it was a "small beginning" indeed, the woollen factory, for such it was, being only 60 feet long by 50 wide. In 1822 the foundation of the first mill was laid. At that time the population of Lowell was but little more than 200. In 1826 it had increased to 2500, in 1836 to 17,633; the population now is in the neighborhood of 25,000. -There are now ten manufacturing companies, with an aggregate capital of about ten and a half millions, doing business at Lowell. These employ, in one way or other, 6320 females and 2915 males. and sealous anti-Slavery paper, in the heart of a The average number of hours during which the females work is ten and a half, and the average wages $2 per week, besides board. After about four years and a half spent in factory-labor the females return to their homes, and others come in their places. Most of them accumulate something handsome during the time spent in the manufactories. temporary, and ere long we shall see it doing but- The morals of Lowell have become proverbial. It would be difficult to find, any where, a more orderly, industrious and thrifty population. The cotton worked up in the Lowell mills during the last year amounted to 61,100 bales. There are, in all, 33 mills and 550 houses, for the occupation of the operatives, belonging to the different incorporated companies. But there is no room for further increase, as all the water-power is exhausted by the existing factories.
